

Studying Medieval Hebrew and Linguistics

Aharon Maman

This talk will touch upon the problems related to defining the borders of the work of medieval Hebrew linguists, both in terms of the geographical space and the chronology, while challenging the conventional demarcation of periods of Hebrew, as well as the methodological difficulties and thematic issues arising from both the synchronic and the diachronic aspects and from the variety of cultures in which both Hebrew and Hebrew linguistics have emerged.